classes these students have taken. Mr. Jackson went on to explain that students do not have more than one open period. A large number of the students are taking classes through the college which requires them to be gone more than one period. Students graduating from Astoria High School only need to have 25 credits but if they go to school for four years they have the ability to earn up to 29 credits. Mr. Jackson announced that the high school is looking at a different bell schedule next year that may help with possible absences after open periods. The board will review the proposed schedule at the board meeting in June.
